The way we frame climate change creates powerful feelings, and that is an absolutely critical part of the energy equation. It needs to be done carefully, but we have to do it. How do we challenge the powerful beliefs and feelings that we're facing climate change? We need to be ready to address climate change and be prepared for the business-as-usual model in the future, because the business-as-usual model is no longer viable. People understand that, and that's what is leading to the change that we're seeing. MO: Many of your students are interested in issues of stewardship or energy and climate change. How can they be better informed? WA: All of these things need to be integrated with one another. People become informed when they first take a look at the issue. So, I'm interested in this because I do think that really leading with hope, that these are issues that will be resolved. All of these things are linked. So, I try to convey that. One of the things that we're doing is that we're going to have the first annual student paper in the university in Uganda in December, where students will write a paper that is published. It's a bit of a different style than The Telegraph of California, but it is like the same idea. I think it will be of interest to students. There have been a number of papers that have come out of the students here. I think it's important to teach students how to think and how to think critically, how to evaluate and synthesize. In other words, how to break down information and then put it together in a coherent way. That's what education should be about. That's what I think is most important. MO: You've been involved in the Peace Corps. What advice would you give to someone wanting to do the same? WA: It's about self-

(...) Tyrant was one of the fastest class of the Chinese-Corsair. When it was equipped with the tail weapon, it could get zero in the least time. Without its speed, it was doomed to be the target of opposing fighters. Like the rest of the class, it had higher than average health and medium armament. Its weapons were similar to the Armbrust, but were slightly weaker. Its main advantage was its ability to unleash devastating afterburner. (...). Game description: Unique super destroyer with powerful afterburner. - Starting working from XLII century. Corsair enemy range. The enemy destroyer will never be at the point of impact after a successful shot. The distance will depend on your incoming velocity from the last target hit, on the number of hits and their power. There is no duration of reach after a successful hit. The maximum number of hits is determined by the size of the launcher and the number of shots in a burst. Each hit, the enemy destroyer loses a certain percentage of energy for power. This percentage depends on the velocity of the projectile. To save energy, weapons are fired in a burst - a sequence of shots in which the destroyer comes to a slow speed for a second. Each shot consumes the energy of the destroyer, and a unique effect occurs after each hit. The ships with the highest forward velocity will have a smaller percent energy lost and a better effect, as a result of a smaller spread between shots. Lowering the energy loss also reduces the size of the weapon's effect. The ship can keep this up only for a limited time. Death of enemy: (...) 2 - 1 - 1 - 4 - 2 - 2 - 2 - 1. - 1 - 1 - 3 - 4 - 4 - 4 - 4 - 4 - 3 - 3 - 1 - 1 - 3 - 3 - 4. Game description: Dramatic variant of the Death of a ship. The enemy destroyer is about to be destroyed, but it is not yet over. The ship will be repaired only when all enemy weapons are spent. After that, the game proceeds just like a standard Death. Stealth: (...) The destroyer is able to remain undetected for a limited time, depending on its current configuration. For example, when the afterburner is fired, it can remain undetected for a short time. Nuclear: (...) The destroyer becomes a nuclear target. All

Yea, all these so called “black widow” paint jobs will make a big difference on top of an already well built bike and will be very stiff and stiffing. Well... not really. There is NO way in hell I would pay that much money to do a paint job and knock off in the next 24 hours. When you look at the complexity of what the Dark Widow does and how she is constructed, it really makes her stiff! The amount of work to get the paint right is not worth the pain in a cycle fit. Besides, with clear coats you can easily apply another coat within a couple days (and even polish in the mean time). But I am not knocking the paint - I worked on a bike with the Artizan BMW show. That was not in Montreal. Oh?Let’s see.. it was the Artizan Racers Challenge - hands down. Yeah I am over exaggerating. I have seen it. Lots of over priced bullshit money where we were working on it. The paint was shit - I mean, I would expect the paint guys to paint some dull shit and make us pay lots of money to fix it.. but.. theres great detail you have to expect with black widow. You really have to do your work on it. Some of the detail is difficult to do, so.. the vendor, you know, they want their product to be looked at like a fine engraving that is to be seen from a short distance. So yea, I can’t get my thrill from cheap nickel silver as I would get from these pieces - which would make it a pale replacement for a serious set of custom parts. I wouldn’t feel like I had paid US$6,0000 for it. I went for my 1st history degree and my first project was an Ibis..... I was digging what they were doing with hybrid frames and couldn’t understand why they weren’t more popular. My instructor fussed at me. “...Why cant you build THAT!!!! It would be brilliant.... and what is your name!?!?!” And I ended up with the project that I ultimately left for now, a bike that everyone thinks is an Ibis. But I couldn't think why people were with an eye of hating it.... and I enjoy my 3rd project. And now it is time to jump

Challenge your friends online with drop-in/drop-out co-op mode. Explore new realms, get into new characters, and make new friends in the new game mode. Dungeons & Dragons: Chronicles of Mystara is a free-to-play, co-op multiplayer action RPG game which drops players into a fantasy setting where they will fight epic battles. Explore the game's nine unique realms while leveling-up their character and equipment. Players can join with their friends to explore the game's over 100 levels and collect rewards from monsters and bosses as they travel through time and space. To go it alone, players can find side missions to complete through the game's world map. Players can select their class before entering the dungeon to start off with a select amount of gold, experience and equipment. They can also select from over 70 different types of monsters, adventure modes and loot to help create a unique and different experience depending on their playstyle. Chronicles of Mystara is playable across Windows, Xbox 360 and Playstation 3.
